Access the Benefits with TPI

The Property Institute (TPI) is the leading professional body for the residential property management sector, setting and raising professional standards through expert advice, training and technical guidance.

With a Network of over 360 residential managing agent members across England and Wales, managing 58,000 blocks, 1.6 million leasehold homes and more than £3bn in client funds each year, TPI offers Partners access to a substantial business opportunity

As a TPI Partner, your brand sits alongside the sector's leading professional body, positioning your business directly to TPI members, with a strong platform to promote your products and services. Together, we champion excellence and support the industry through evolving technical and legislative changes.

Join an established network of over 130 Partners, including accountants, legal firms, surveyors, recruitment agencies, health and safety consultants and software providers, who are already seeing the benefits of partnering with TPI.

What TPI Partners Say

"TPI continues to raise professional standards and quality of service in the leasehold sector. PDC is proud to be a TPI Partner and align itself with an organisation of like-minded ethos."

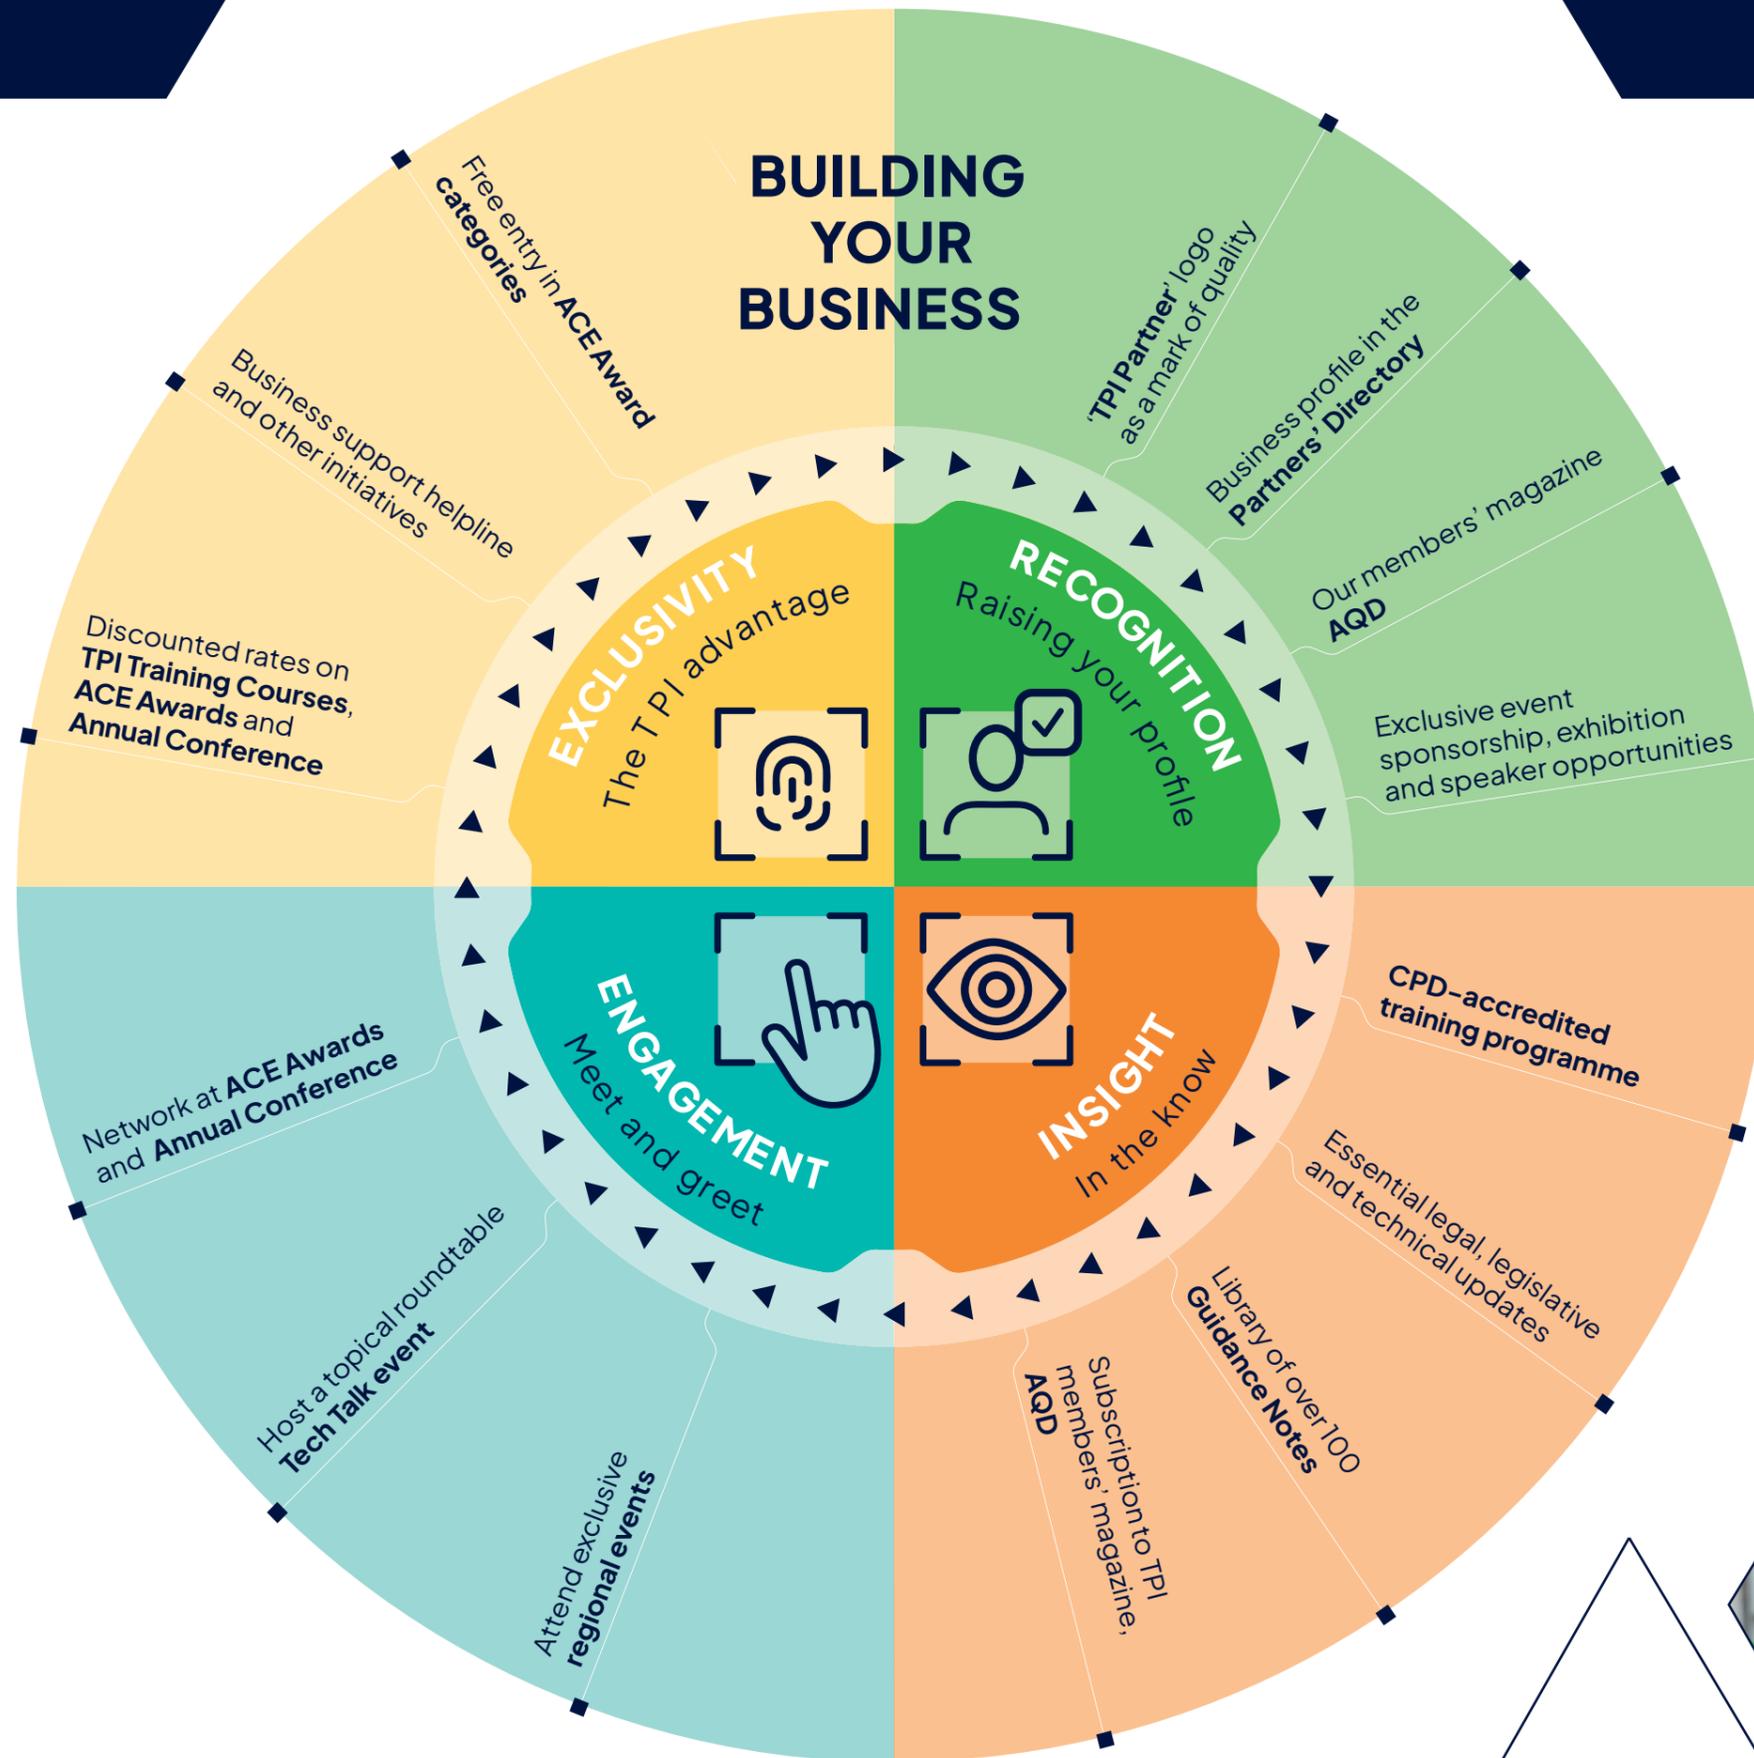

Joe Tona, Director, Property Debt Collection

"As a key supplier to the industry, TPI Partner membership allows Adiuvo to demonstrate our commitment to the highest levels of service and quality, which we feel TPI upholds."

Colin Stokes, Managing Director, Adiuvo

"Since becoming a TPI Partner member we have grown our client base within the sector considerably. The TPI membership programme is run efficiently and there's regular well-organised events we can attend. We work with many trade associations and membership organisations, but TPI is up there with the best."

Marc Wheatley, UK Channel Manager, Full Power Utilities Ltd

The Property Institute (TPI)

Raising standards in residential property management, The Property Institute (TPI) is the professional body for residential property managers in England, Scotland and Wales, facilitating safer, well-managed property communities.

TPI actively supports its members to continually improve building management standards through their work and ongoing professional development, ensuring people's homes are managed competently, safely and ethically.

Comprising around 7,200 property managers and over 380 managing agent firms, TPI members collectively manage more than two million leasehold homes across over 55,000 residential blocks and estates in England and Wales, alongside more than 375,000 freehold flats in Scotland and institutional build-to-rent homes across the UK.

Beyond its extensive membership network, The Property Institute's mission is to promote professionalism and best practice in residential building management, ensuring residents are safe in their homes. It achieves this by accrediting and auditing member firms against its Consumer Charter and Standards, delivering a wide range of Ofqual-accredited qualifications and professional training, and providing Continuing Professional Development (CPD) through seminars, workshops, webinars, conferences and events. Alongside this, TPI offers guidance and support to the profession and, over the past two decades, has awarded more than 10,000 qualifications to its professional members.
